Final Returns of Victory Loan

TORONTO, Jan. 21—Final returns on the Victory Loan of 1919 were given out today and show total subscriptions of $682,632,215. Although no official announcement has been made it is generally thought that the government will accept $50,000,000 of the subscriptions. While the total number of subscribers showed a considerable decrease, the subscriptions per head of those applying for bonds showed a good increase, the figure being $821.70 in 1919, as compared with $629.80 in 1918.

Winter Fire Protection

Winter fires in barns, stables or outhouses are usually caused by the knocking over or explosion of kerosene lamps or lanterns. Keep a few pails of dry sand on hand. Dry sand will not freeze. In the incipient stages of an oil fire, and will smother, whereas water will spread it.

Export Beef

If Canadian exportation of beef was increased twenty times it would only just meet the importation into the United Kingdom alone, not to speak of other European countries. The British consumption of imported beef is five million hundred-weight annually.

Planning Work of 1920

The need of bringing the volume of production from the fields, the forests, the factories, the mines and the manufacturing industries of Canada to the highest possible point this year, and in succeeding years, is so clearly recognized by students of world finance and economics that it is not to be wondered at that they are so industriously preaching the gospel of greater production. There is danger, however, that this constant dwelling upon the need and duty of greater production may cause a feeling of impotence and resentment among those who are engaged in productive work and who feel that they understand their duty and appreciate their opportunities just as fully as do professors, editors, politicians and financial prognosticators.

Farmers, in particular, are sick of hearing lectures and reading articles painting out to them their duty in this matter. What they are much more concerned about is the inauguration of policies by the Federal Government which will have a practical effect in increasing agricultural production by raising it to a point possible for the workers on the land to secure the necessary machinery and capital to enable them to increase their operations.

Nevertheless, one diligent farmer will do otherwise than without the information from authoritative sources indicating the magnitude of the opportunity now open to farmers, livestock producers, and others engaged in various branches of food production. Like all good business men, the farmer must welcome information relative to the industry in which he is engaged.

Since writing the article which appeared in this column last week, certain events have transpired which only add force to what was there stated. Henry B. Thomson, who was chairman of the Canada Food Board during the war, has returned to England after spending eight months in England with the Canadian Trade Commission, and he is bringing first-hand information as to the demand for food products in the Old Land. Mr. Thomson is of the opinion that the farmers and livestock producers of the Dominion have the chance of their lives to establish themselves in special lines against all comers in the British markets. Canadian bacon, he says, has established itself there and commands a better price than the United States product. Of beef, the United Kingdom imports five hundred million hundredweights a year, and if Canadian exports were increased twenty times it would only pay all British requirements, not to speak of the great continental European markets which will probably be opened this year. In 1920, he reports, Great Britain will require two and a half billion eggs, while the largest export from the Dominion in any one year only totalled forty-five million.

The embargo on Canadian wheat shipments to the United States has been raised by the Washington government, and one of the immediate results is the sale of many millions of bushels around the line by the Canadian Wheat Board, and the raising of the price to Canadian millers from $2.3 to $2.80 a bushel, with corresponding increases in the price of flour and of bread to the Canadian people. But it means a better price to the Canadian wheat grower and gives increased value to the wheat participation certificates held by him. It would also seem to foreshadow a good price for the 1920 wheat crop, and no very mild fall to pre-war prices.

Canadian farmers have, therefore, a market at home and abroad for all the things they can produce, and as the world's highest prices. Unlike producers of some articles of commerce, they need entertain no fear of their products being a drag on the market, or of facing the necessity of selling at slaughter or bargain counter prices.

There is another reason why maximum food production will be good business for Canadians, individually and collectively, in 1920. Not only are they assured of adequate markets and good prices for all they can produce, but heavy production and large exports will enable them to buy more cheaply abroad. Canadians, of necessity, must buy largely in the United States. We buy far more from that country than we sell to it. To the extent that our exports to the United States fail to balance our imports from that country we must pay to import hard cash. Because of the adverse balance of trade against us the effect has been for some time past that it takes about $100,000 to $110,000 of Canadian money to pay for every $100,000 worth of goods purchased by Canada in the United States. This enormously increases the cost of everything American bought by a Canadian farmer. It increases the price he pays for machinery, for oils, for boots and shoes and clothing. By increasing production of those things from our farms, forests, fisheries and mines which the United States requires, we can increase our exports and thus remove this handicap which is now operating to the disadvantage of our people in the matter of their purchases, much the same as a very substantial increase in the protective customs tariff would operate.

These are purely business and economic matters to be taken into consideration, not only by farmers, but by all producers in Canada in the planning of their work for the year upon which we have now entered.

An Unusual Fruit Exhibit

Oranges grown and ripened in Western Canada are another and uncommon proof of its possibilities as a fruit growing country. An orange grove at Estevan, a small town about ten miles north of Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan, is being exhibited in the window of a local store. The fruit, while not as large as the best California products, is considerably larger than the Japanese variety and apparently perfectly formed.

"There's a Reason"

Proof that Some Women do Avoid Operations

Mrs. Etta Dorion, of Ogdensburg, Wis., says:

"I suffered from female troubles which caused piercing pains like a knife through my back and side. I finally lost all my strength so I had to go to bed. The doctor advised an operation but I would not listen to it. I then read what I had read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and tried it. The first bottle brought great relief and six bottles have entirely cured me. All women who have female troubles of any kind should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

How Mrs. Boyd Avoided an Operation.

"I suffered from female troubles which caused me much suffering and two doctors decided that I would have to go through an operation before I could get well."

"My mother, who had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, advised me to try it before submitting to an operation. It relieved me from my troubles so I could do my house work without any difficulty. I advise any woman who is afflicted with female troubles to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial and it will do as much for them." — Mrs. MAURIE BOYD, 1421 6th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio.

Ancient Glass Statues

Made of Green-tinted Glass of Local Manufacture

Evidence that the manufacture of glass in Ceylon is no novelty has been discovered by Dr. D. E. Bliss, in the Indian Peninsula. The doctor discovered on his discoveries at a recent meeting of the Ceylon branch of the Royal Asiatic Society. He declared he had found glass beads and glass fragments which proved the antiquity of the Ceylon glass industry and which, by their greenish hue, explained in his opinion the constant references in ancient Sinhalese works to emerald statues of Buddha. It was quite clear from Dr. Bliss' description that the statues were not emerald, but were made of green-tinted glass, which must have been of local manufacture. The glass beads which he had discovered were of all palpable antiquity, for he had found not only beads which were bored with the three holes converging inward in the usual fashion, but also beads which were not so perforated.

The Belgian Railroad Department, presently concluding its program of electrification, the first line to be tried being that between Antwerp and Brussels. The experiment will be made on a passenger service. A subcommittee, organized by the Minister of Railroads, has decided on the style of car to be used and contracts will soon be ready. The third-rail system will be employed except in switching stations, where the overhead trolley will be employed. The second system is not expected to take place before the end of 1921, owing to the amount of work which has been to be accomplished.

U. F. A Have

Successful Year

The past year has eclipsed all previous records in the way of membership gains in the U. F. A., according to the secretary's annual report submitted to the convention last week. More than six hundred members have been added as in the first five years of the organization's existence and three times as many as in any one previous year. The exact figures have not yet been made up, but the membership throughout the province is now put at approximately 29,000, as compared with 18,335 in 1918.

It is pointed out, however, that less than fifty per cent of the farmers of Alberta are yet enrolled in the U. F. A. ranks, and including the farm women less than twenty-five per cent.

Interest in Politics

The entry of the farmers' organization into the political field and the holding of various district conventions are given as partial reasons for the stimulated interest in the membership campaign. Many new local decisions of taking part in the political movement sprang up, and in some districts 100 per cent of the farmers signed up.

Membership in the women's section has doubled during the year, and a permanent secretary for this department has been engaged for the past six months. The junior branches have also grown in number and importance.

Finance in Good Shape

Despite the fact that early in the year the provincial department of agriculture was notified that the organization would not require the grant of $2,000 for 1919, the finances of the association are in a much better position than ever before, largely owing to the assessment paid by the United Grain Growers, Limited. While a number of increased obligations have been undertaken by the central organization this year, some economies have also been effected, with the result that there has been only a slight increase in the total expenses, notwithstanding the increased amount of work undertaken by the central office. Every endeavor has been made, it is declared, to put the central office on an efficient and businesslike basis.

The report states that the secretary's convention, which were held in the first and second weeks of November, were highly successful, the Edmonton meeting being especially fruitful in valuable suggestions as to how best to tackle various local problems.

Milk Shippers Organized

It is pointed out in the report that considerable time of the central secretary has been taken up during the year with the organization of milk shippers. Milk shippers' organizations in affiliation with the U. F. A. have been established in Calgary, Edmonton, Lethbridge, Medicine Hat, and Didsbury. In Calgary and Lethbridge the producers have been able to practically set the price on their milk. It is the intention of the central secretary to assist this work as far as possible and extend the organization to cream shippers as well as milk shippers. There seems to be a growing belief that it will soon be necessary for producers of milk and cream to organize to handle their own product in the same way as the farmers have organized to handle the grain business.

"COW-BILL"—NOTICE.

Applications will be received from farmers in Alberta for lease under the Live Stock Encouragement Act for the purchase of cows during the year 1920 up until April 30th of this year. It being decided to handle applications coming from many parts of the province at different times of the year, it has been decided to limit the applications to the first four months. Farmers interested will kindly govern themselves accordingly and get all their applications in to the Live Stock Commissioner before April 30th, 1920.

Endorses Group Organization

The discussion of the resolutions on group organization was taken up after a resolution from Lakeview Local No. 71, declaring that supporters of the farmers' national platform should be admitted into full membership in the political association without joining the U. F. A., and introduced by Mr. McKinney of that local, had been tabled, D. W. Warner remarking that the convention had no jurisdiction over the political association which it did not create. Mr. McKinney later moved to table the resolutions endorsing the principles of group organization for political purposes, considering it desirable to take this course in the interests of the unity of the farmers. Only six votes of the convention were recorded for the motion.

Considerable discussion over the principles of group organization took place. President Wood in a brief speech, said:

The U. F. A., he believed, was an economic class group. "I don't believe," he added, "in legislation for any one class. I do believe that class group organization is the only hope of civilization."

CHAPTER THIRTEEN
Mrs. Hardy accepted the surroundings she found in the city that was to be her home with not a little incredulity. For some days she trod the city as a deep mare which had quipped its two nature in order to deceive her. She smiled at the men with which she saw through all the disguises. One of these days the cloak of respectability would be thrown off and the shouting and shouting of the cow punchers would proclaim the West as it really was.

Very slowly it dawned upon Mrs. Hardy that this respectable, thriving city with its well dressed, properly mannered people, its polite, its aggressiveness, its churches and theatres and schools, its law and order and its sternness, was a city that would have thought it possible? She had expected a desolate to ride in and everything else. The city was slowly it dawned upon her that this after all, was the real West, stern, earnest, crude, perhaps, but very truly the years of a great battle with the wilderness still fresh upon the person lacking the city that only time can give to a landscape of civilization; but lacking also the mindlessness, the mindless, the mindless artificiality of the city, the artificiality, the artificiality. And the atmosphere! Day after day brought its changes, its the weather, for one, was told to observe the rule of contrasts; even after evening food of wheat and barley with its own golden glory; night after night a crisp temperature sent her reaching for comforters. Surely she had never lived before. Each day she lived in a semi-intoxicated form of an investigated attitude. And last of all something had happened to her. She did not know just what or when, but presently she discovered it was gone. Even Mrs. Hardy, steeped for sixty years in a life of precedent and rule, and eager to catch the enthusiasm of a new land where precedent and rule and customs are something of a handicap.

"We must buy a home," she said to Irene. "We cannot afford to continue living at a hotel, and we must have our own home. You must look up a responsible dealer whose advice we can trust in the matter of this kind." And was it remarkable that Irene Hardy should think at once of the firm of Conward & Eldon? It was not. She had indeed, been thinking of a number of that firm ever since the decision in favor of the West. She had felt a peculiar hesitation about enquiring openly for Dave Eldon, but upon meeting a new person in the person of Mrs. Conward, she had valued the great question with an apparent nervousness which did not in the slightest reflect the acute Roberts. It is the business of newspaper people to know things and people, and it seemed to Mrs. Hardy that she could ask such a question of Mrs. Conward in a sort of professional way. But she had not been prepared for the reply.

The fact is Irene had not been at all sure that she wanted to marry Dave Eldon. She wanted very much to meet him again; she was curious to know how the years had fared with him, and her curiosity was not unaccompanied with a fair sentiment; but she was not at all sure that she should marry him. She had tried to picture him in the eye of her imagination; she was sure he had acquired a modest education; he had probably been reasonably successful in business, either as an employee, or in a small way, on his own account. She was moderately sure of all this; but there were pessimistic moods in which she was sure that the difference of his old life soon after the inspiration of her presence had been sufficient to bring him back to his old life in the foothills, or perhaps following the footsteps of her father, and in such moods she was sorry, but she knew she could never, never marry him.

"What," Dave Eldon, the tell-tale said, "Dave Eldon had said, 'I already know him.' And then the newspaper woman had gone on to tell what a figure Dave was in the business life of the city, and to declare that he might be equally prominent in the social life, did his friends read him in that direction. 'One of our biggest young men,' Bert Morrison had said. 'Reserved a little, but his own engaging, but his substance is white.'"

That gave a new turn to the situation. Irene had always seemed to Dave to be a success; suddenly she doubted whether she had wanted him to be so big a success. And with that doubt came another and more disturbing one, which if it had ever before crossed her mind, had found no lodgment there. She had doubted whether she should wish to marry Dave; she had never allowed herself to doubt that Dave would wish to marry her. Secretly she had expected to rather share him with her ten years development with the culture and knowledge which study and travel and life had given to her, and she realized that her future would share but dimly the greater life of his.

She became conscious of a very great desire to know with Dave the history of his childhood. It was easy to see that the office of Conward & Eldon, it stood on a principal corner of a principal street, and the name was known to the wayfarer in great ill letters. Thence she led her mother, and found herself standing on the marble floor of the richly appointed waiting room in a second excitement which she could with difficulty conceal. She was, indeed, very uncertain about the next development.

For her mother had to be relieved with a young man asked contentedly what could be done for them. "We want to see the head of the firm," said Mrs. Hardy. "We want to buy a house." It occurred to Irene that in some respects her mother was extremely artless, but the issue was for the moment postponed.

They were then taken to Conward's office. This had been when they would have seen no further than a head elevator, but there were changing and real estate dealers were looking the history of the days of their great success. Conward gave them the welcome of a man who expects to make money out of his visitors. He closed a very comfortable chair for Mrs. Hardy; he adjusted the blinds

And His Family Medicines

MOST people first knew Dr. Chase through his Receipt Book. Its reliability and usefulness made him friends everywhere.

When he put his Nerve Food, Kidney-Liver Pills and other medicines on the market they received a hearty welcome, and their exceptional merit has kept them high in the public esteem.

Take Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for example. There is no treatment to be compared to them as a means of regulating the liver, kidneys and bowels and curing constipation, biliousness, kidney disease and indigestion.

to a library, he discarded his cigarette and leaned upon them with as great a show of cordiality as his somewhat better appearance would permit. The years had not been over kind to Conward's person. His natural tendency to corpulence had been abetted by excessive eating; his face was red and fleshy, his lips had no more color than his face, and nature, in deciding to deprive him of a portion of his hair, had very wisely elected to take it in patches, giving his head a sort of pinto effect. These imperfections were quickly appreciated by Irene, but his manner appealed to Mrs. Hardy, who culled her life history with considerably less detail, dwelling more than once upon the perfections of the late Dr. Hardy—which perfections she now showed a disposition to magnify, as implying a certain distinction into herself—and ended with the confession that the West was not as bad as she had feared and anyway it was a case of living here or dying elsewhere, so she would have to make the best of it. And here they were. And ought they see a house?

Conward appeared to be reflecting a moment, but he saw that his inexperienced buyer, an opportunity to reduce his holdings in real estate was knocking at his door. His difficulty was that he had no key to the financial resources of his visitors. They had lived in good circumstances; they were the lucky of a successful professional man, but as Conward well knew, many successful professional men had a habit of living that sold long head on the backs of their incomes. The only thing was to throw out a lead.

"You are wanting a nice home. I take it, that can be bought at a favorable price for cash. You would consider an investment of say—"

He paused, and Mrs. Hardy supplied the information for which he was waiting. "About twenty-five thousand dollars," she said. "We can hardly invest that much," Irene interrupted, in a whisper. "We must have something to live on." "People here live on the profits of their investments, do they not, Mr. Conward?" Mrs. Hardy inquired. "I have been told that that is the way they live, and they seem to live very well indeed."

Wireless for Venezuela

So great is the propaganda power of the modern press that the wonders of the wireless are commonly taken for granted by the widest circle. Yet the resolution of the Venezuelan government to install a wireless apparatus in the environs of Caracas, the capital city, was of such tremendous importance and news value, that it occupied a good part of the front page of the Universal on October 16, the account being printed in large type and "featured," much as American papers have recently been "featuring" the League of Nations.

Airman Discovers

Ancient City

Would Never Have Been Noticed on The Level

Lieut.-Col. J. A. Beasley gives in the geographical journal an interesting example of how photography from an airship can extend our knowledge. When making an aerial reconnaissance in Mesopotamia over territory occupied by the Turks, he took a series of photographs near Samarra. It shows distinctly the ruins of an ancient city extending twenty miles along the Tigris River and two miles and a half wide, large enough to shelter easily 4,000,000 inhabitants. This city would never have been noticed on the level, since it is not marked by anything but scattered hills, although pottery and medals had been discovered on the site. But the photographs show clearly its whole plan, with its fortifications, canals for irrigation and streets.
